IN THE CIRCUIT COURT

A case of the Crystal River Lumber Company against the Dunnellon Phosphate Company, which began some twelve years ago, is being tried in the circuit court here this week. The jury was drawn Monday morning and the case has been moving along as rapidly as a constant fight of the opposing counsel would permit.

The trial of this case occupied ten days in this court some ten years ago and was decided in favor of the defendant company. Later developments showed that certain lands which should have been included were not included in the former case and a new trial was granted by the circuit court. The court's decision to grant a new trial was upheld by the supreme court, hence the present trial.

Properties valued at upward of $100,000 are involved in the case, and many witnesses have been summoned to appear from all parts of the state. Messrs. Anderson & Anderson are attorneys for the plaintiff, while the defendants are being represented by Mr. Raymond B. Bullock of this city, and Messrs. Bisbee & Bidell of Jacksonville, assisted by Mr. H. L. Anderson of Jacksonville.

It is thought that the case will be concluded by the end of the week.

Momentous Future in Woman's Mind

The expectant mother revolves in her mind all we understand by destiny. And it is of the utmost importance that her physical comfort be our first thought. There is a most splendid remedy for this purpose, known as "Mother's Friend." It is applied over the muscles of the stomach, gently rubbed in, and at once penetrates to relieve all strain on nerves, cords, ligaments and all parts involved. It makes the muscles so pliant that they expand naturally. And at the same time they are invigorated by the absence of harassing pains so apt to distress the mind. Whatever will add to the comfort of the expectant mother is a great and helpful influence since a calm and peaceful period must have a wonderfully beneficial impress upon the coming child. Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" of any druggist and you will realize why so many women declare it to be the most helpful remedy they have known. Write today to Bradford Regulator Co., 402 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a splendid look of great interest and value to every expectant mother.

OCALA SOCIAL AFFAIRS

The marriage of Mr. Walter Liddell and Miss Rosella Martin was a beautiful event in Jacksonville yesterday evening. The wedding took place in the Snyder Memorial church and the ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. J. H. Martin. Mr. Liddell is a Marion county boy, born at Santos where he lived with his parents until after his graduation from the Ocala high school and from the law department of Stetson University, after which he went to Jacksonville to practice his profession. He has the congratulations of his many friends in this section. The bride was attended by Miss Nellie Fuller and Miss Ella May Davis of St. Augustine. Little Helen Wood was flower girl and Master Lonnie Farris, nephew of the groom was ring bearer. The groom was attended by Mr. J. A. Rosenberg as best man and Mr. Frank Smith of Orlando was groomsmen. Mr. and Mrs. Liddell have gone north on a wedding trip.

The third of a series of charming informal parties at which Miss Meta Jewett has entertained for her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sanford Jewett of Lakeland, was given this afternoon.

The diversion was auction and four tables were arranged for the guests, two in the living room and two on the piazza. Flowers and fern constituted the attractive decorations. After the interesting games an ice course was served and dainty prizes awarded.

Spending the afternoon pleasantly with Miss Jewett and Mrs. Jewett were Mrs. C. H. Lloyd, Mrs. C. S. Cullen, Mrs. C. L. Anderson, Miss Mamie Taylor, Mrs. M. J. Roess, Mrs. J. J. Gerig, Miss Emily Stotesbury, Mrs. Albert Gerig, Mrs. L. P. Wilson, Mrs. E. T. Helvenston, Mrs. E. J. Crook, Mrs. Charles Rheinauer, Mrs. E. J. Mills-Price, Miss Minnie Gamsby and Miss Lou Gamsby.

Mr. H. M. Hampton has returned from a business trip to Jacksonville. Mrs. Hampton, who accompanied him, is the guest of Miss Saunders and will not return until later in the week.

Mrs. T. E. Bridges will give her Sunday school class a picnic to Lake Weir tomorrow afternoon and the affair is being most pleasantly anticipated by the girls composing the class.

Miss Maude Alexander of Brooksville has many friends in Ocala who will be delighted to learn that she will arrive in the city tomorrow for a few days' visit with her cousin, Mrs. E. T. Helvenston. Miss Alexander is en route to Jacksonville to visit her brother, Mr. Gary Alexander.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith and little daughter of Clearwater, were guests last night of Mr. Smith's sister, Mrs. L. H. Pillans en route to Martel to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Smith.

Mr. Charles Pillans of Fort Green, came up yesterday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pillans at Electra.

The friends of Miss Frances Melver will regret to hear of her illness.

Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Munroe are planning a motoring trip to Georgia the first of July. They will be accompanied to Atlanta by Mr. J. M. Thomas and his niece, Miss Callie Gissendanner.

Miss Blair Woodrow, who since the close of the Woman's College in Columbia, S. C., has been the guest of a schoolmate in Columbia, has returned home. Miss Woodrow is a popular and attractive member of the college set and her friends regret that she did not stop in Ocala before going on to Lake Weir to join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Woodrow at their summer home.

Miss Annie Davis who has been spending three weeks in town, expects to return to her cottage at Lake Weir tomorrow afternoon. She will be accompanied by Miss Collier Clark, who will spend some time with her.

Harold Meade and LaGrange Sistrunk, who have been enjoying camp life at Lake Weir for a week, returned home this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Talley of St. Petersburg, who have been to Gainesville to attend commencement exercises, where their son Mr. Ralph Talley, graduated from the law department of the university, stopped over today with Mr. T. I. Arnold on their way home.

Mrs. R. A. Green will arrive from Clearwater tomorrow, and make her home for the next few weeks at the Arms House.

Mr. Harry Peter has brought his family from Dunnellon, and they now occupy the Barse residence on Plantula street.

Ethel Thayer, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Pillans is ill.

Mrs. J. M. Gross requests the members of her class to meet tomorrow afternoon at the parsonage.

ing taxi and whirled away up the street.

A fourth boat. A little French chauffeur with a tiny mustache and a stiff woman with high cheek bones, who bent and unbent painfully as she was pulled to the dock.

"Hey!" The overcoat and cap at last had moved, rapidly, violently. They pounced between Henri and Marie. "You're pinched!"

"Pinched, monsieur? Impossible!" protested Henri in astonishment. "For what is it that we are pinched? Behold the boat! We have returned it." Marie started to run away.

"Hooryay!" On his side Henri jerked and, laughing gayly, sprinted after Marie. Up on the street, in the shelter of a warehouse, stood a touring car. As he ran Henri reached in his pocket for a key. Behind them came pounding the overcoat and cap, blowing a shrill watchman's whistle through the rift in the collar. The fugitive from justice, easily outdistancing the heavy rubber boots, gained the car. With a bow which had in it all the grace and gallantry which could have been displayed had he used much more time Henri assisted Marie to her seat. He sprang in beside her. He inserted his key. He pressed the starting button. Silence! Bah! The motor was cold!

"You're under arrest!" And an iron-like middle finger thumped Henri on the shoulder. A policeman had arrived. "Arrest, M. Officer?" cried Henri. "Impossible." And he made another effort to start his engine. "Look, the boat we have!"

"Do you know Officer Dowd?" asked Marie. "Dowd?" repeated the solemn policeman, shaking his head.

"Do you know Officer Moran?" "Can't say as I know Moran."

"Do you know Officer O'Toole?" And she beamed high up into the solemn policeman's face.

"O'Toole? O'Toole? East side?" "Listen, M. Officer, eh?" broke in Henri.

Marie had furtively kicked him on the shins. "We took the boat, yes, but you will comprehend, monsieur!"

"Get it? He says he took the boat!" This was from the cap and the overcoat.

"Take 'em along!" rumbled the cap and overcoat.

"I guess I'll have to take you," the officer said regretfully. "Will you walk or will you ride? It's only up a couple of blocks."

"Walk!" exclaimed Henri in astonishment. "Never!" He rushed to the front of his car and cranked it. Off they went to the police station.

CHAPTER II.

A FURTIVE eyed butler with a young face on the withered and stooped body of an old man admitted the runaway bride and her escort into a magnificent studio hung with rare tapestries, embellished with exquisite paintings, fitted with quaint furniture and objects of art from all over the world. And here June Warner was introduced by Artist Durban to his wife, a bright eyed woman of great charm. She received June with almost gushing cordiality.

"The Spirit of the Marshes," laughed Durban, and it was with a professional eye that he this time surveyed the beautiful girl. "It was an utterly impossible adventure, my dear." He stood before an elaborately carved Florentine table, while the ladies sat in the loggion, in the flare of the grateful fire. His eyes still glowed with the excitement of the morning, and he laughed. "First time I've had a chance to use the revolvers you make me carry when I go out for the marsh sunrise. I was busy sketching, trying to catch that wonderful scarlet of the sun and the mist—you know, my dear—when suddenly I heard a piercing scream. It could come but from one direction—the hut. Immense! A real adventure! I folded my easel, drew my revolvers and told Jimmy to push through the reeds for life or death. Before we could reach the hut there were shrieks upon shrieks in a young girl's voice, then shots, one after another. Wonderful!" He shook back his long hair and laughed, and his wife paled. June trembled and grew faint with the memory of it, and her eyes distended with a recurrence of her terror. "As we burst through the tall marsh rushes I saw on the island this beautiful creature held by a gigantic murderer. A woman with a beautiful silk shawl over her rough clothing was running toward the hut. Another murderer was lying on the ground. Down the channel from the open water there came two speed boats, one driven by a man with a mustache. In evening clothes and a silk hat, and the other, driven by a round headed man, carried a dark, handsome fellow with a black Vandyke, who stood up shooting two revolvers. I fired in the air. The gi-were led away and locked in their respective cells.

In the dimly rose and white drawing room which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned sat in consultation with June's father and mother and Bobbie Blethering and June's bosom friend, Iris, and the three detectives. On the floor by Mrs. Moore's feet lay June's handsome col. lie, Bouncer, but at the first intimation of his mistress' name he was up and barking loudly.

"Your wife's dog?" said the chief of Ned's detective force, and Ned nodded. "We'll take him."

Out in the bay a steam yawl, its stovepipe cold, was being towed majestically in by a rowboat, at the oars of which sat a thin whiskered dandy and a boy with cracked knuckles and a short, thick man, whose face was one continuous rotary smudge. This man was Bill Wolf, and through his smudge were already streaking rivulets of honest toil. On board the yawl and urging her crew with helpful voices and gesture was Honoria Blye, cinders in her high arched brows, cinders in her darkened hair and cinders in her disposition.
